METAPHORS OF GLOBALIZATION

SOLIDITY

refers to barriers that prevent or make difficult the movement of things. Solid can be natural and man made.

Landforms (natural)

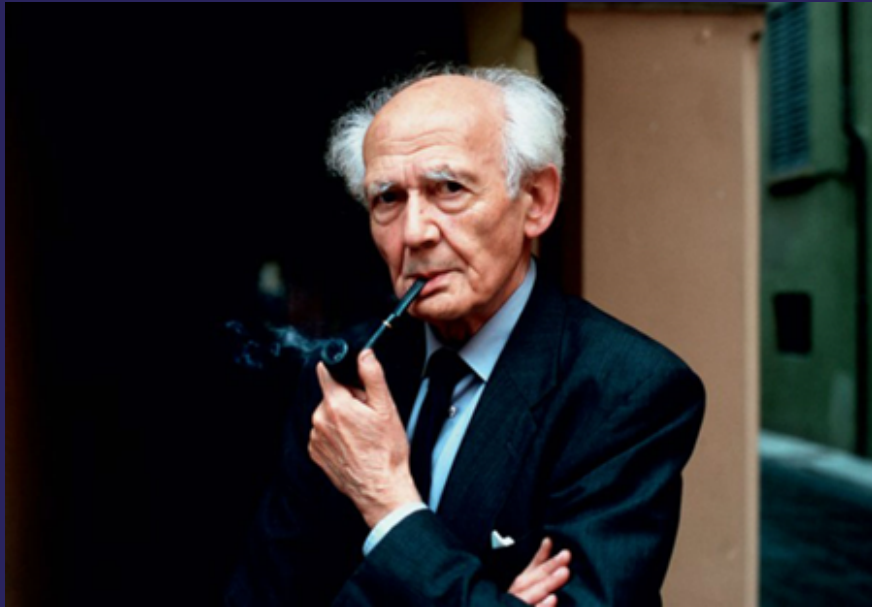

Bodies of water(natural)

Great wall of China(manmade)

LIQUIDITY

refers to the increasing ease of movement of people, things and information, and places in the contemporary world.

Zygmunt Bauman's idea (sociologist and philosopher)
– First, liquid phenomena change quickly and its aspects, spatial and temporal, are in continuous fluctuation. This means that space and time are crucial elements of globalization.

e.g. In global finance, changes in stock market are a matter of seconds.

Another characteristics of liquid phenomena is that their movement is difficult to stop.
e.g. videos in YouTube or other social media are hard to halt once they become viral.

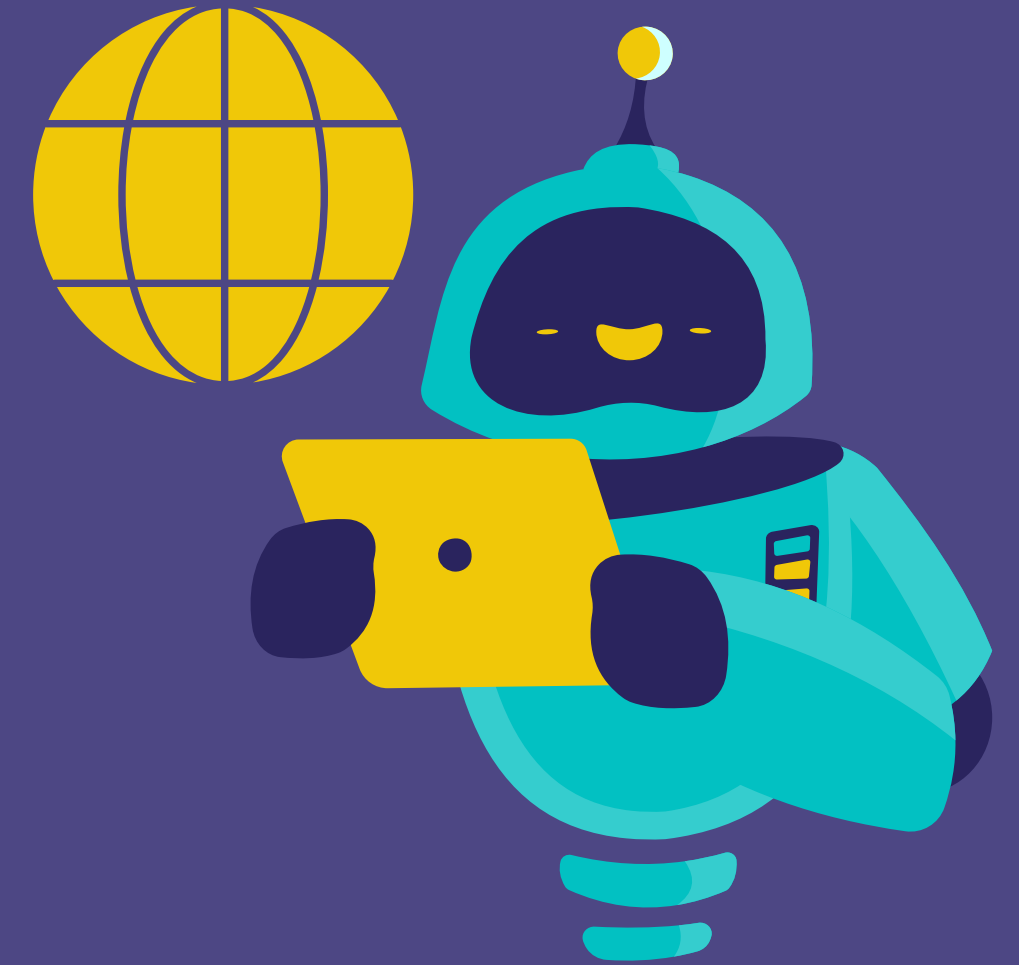

FLOWS

movements of the people, things, places, and information brought by the growing 'POROSITY' of global limitations.

e.g. food from one state are being introduced to other state such as hamburger, sushi, ramen, samgyupsal, French fries and many other cuisine.

Another example are Global Financial Crises. For example American Financial Crisis affects the Europe in 2008.
Another is the virtual flow of legal and illegal information such as vlogs, child pornography, respectively and immigrants recreating ethnic enclaves in host countries

THEORIES OF GLOBALIZATION

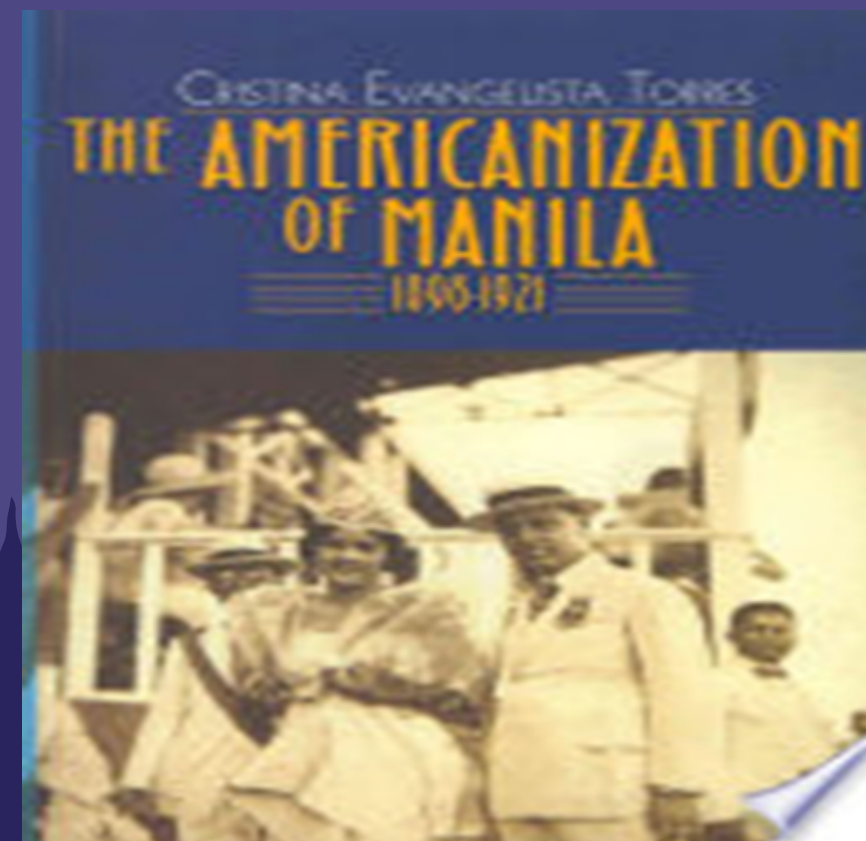

HOMOGENEITY

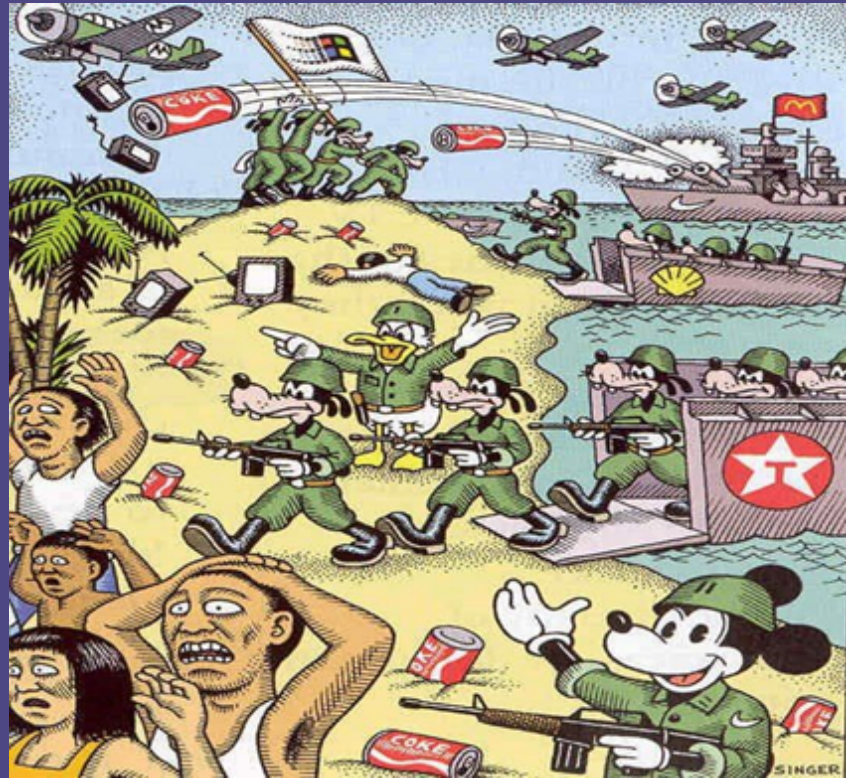

refers to the increasing sameness in the world as cultural inputs, economic factors, and political orientations of societies expand to create common practices, same economies, and similar government form.

Christianity was brought to us by the Spaniards.

Philippine Americanization

cultural imperialism

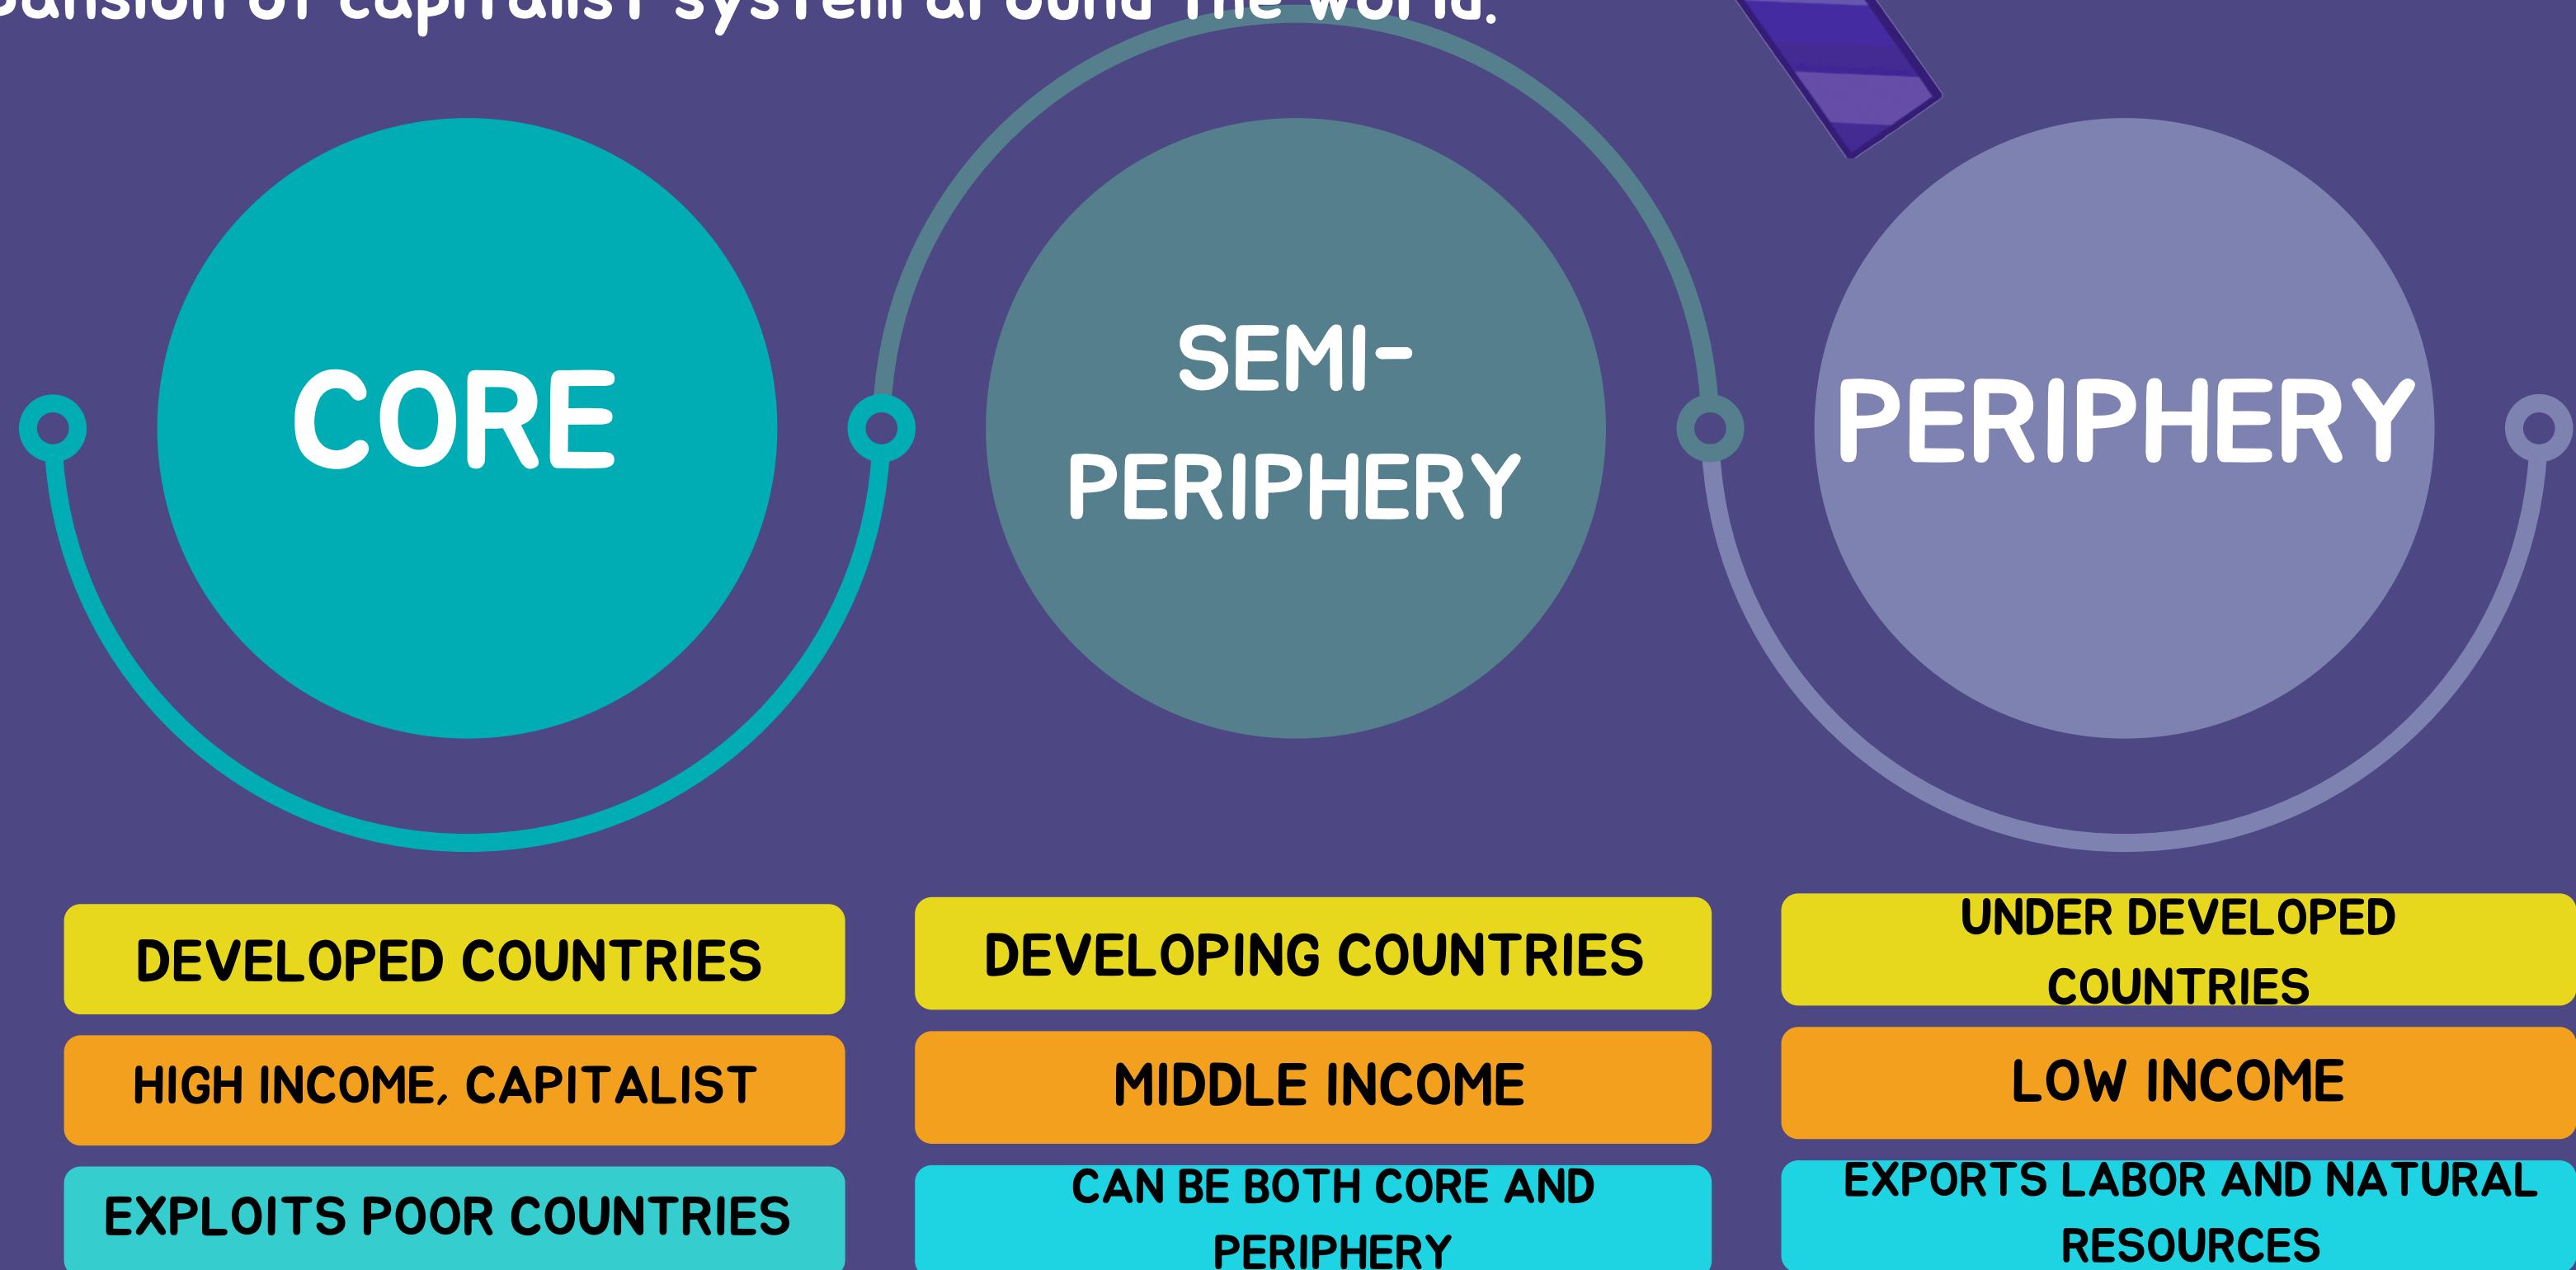

cultural hybridization

HETEROGENEITY

This pertains to the creation of various cultural practices, new economies, and political groups because of interaction of elements from different societies in the world. This is contrary to the theory of 'cultural imperialism' and they associated heterogeneity with 'cultural hybridization'

WORLD-SYSTEM THEORY

A perspective that globalization is essentially the expansion of capitalist system around the world.

WORLD POLITY THEORY

State remains an important component of world society, but primary attention goes to global cultural and organization in which states are embedded.

WORLD CULTURE THEORY

Agrees that world culture is new and important but it is less homogenous.

Base on Meyers & Ramirez

Countries want to be 'modern' nations

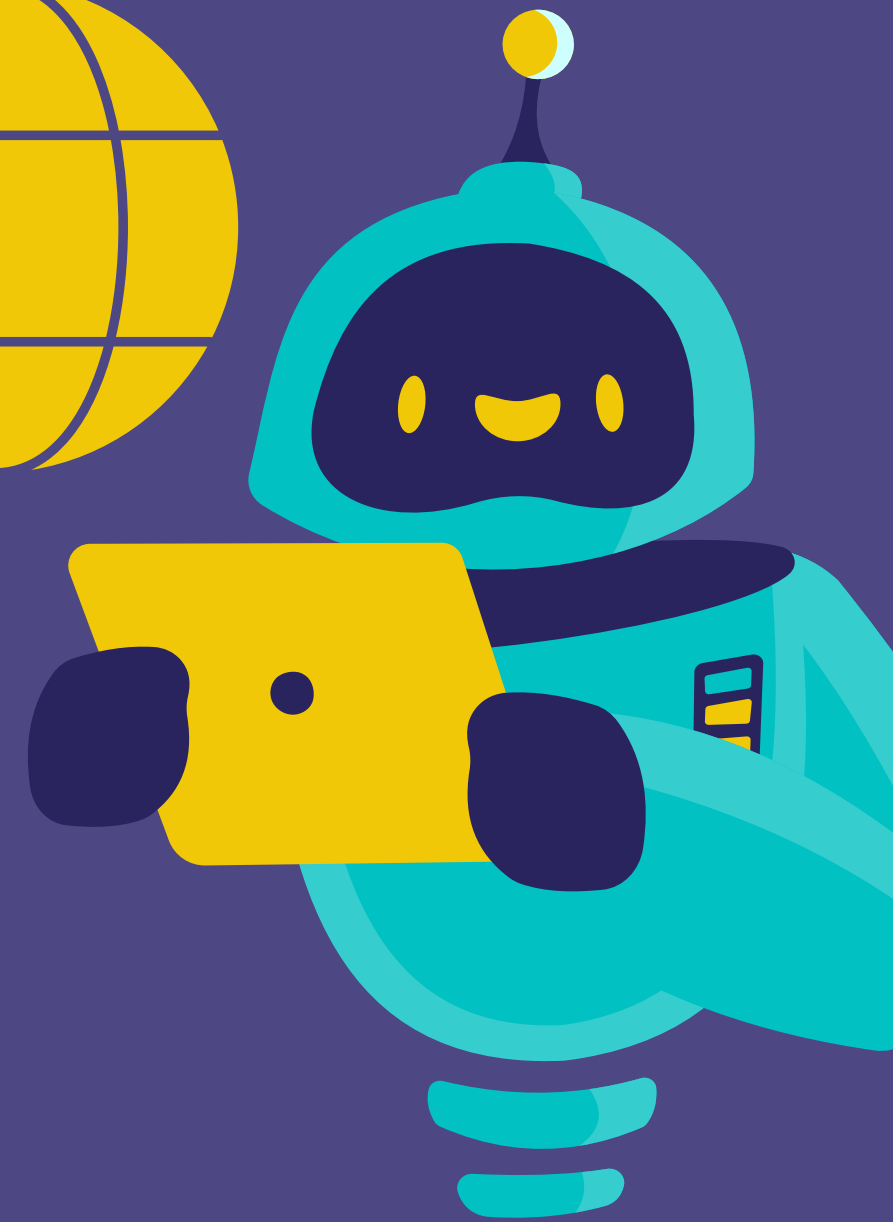

- similar development goals, projects, and commitment.

- western civilization as the main reference of the world models

ORIGINS AND HISTORY OF GLOBALIZATION

HARDWIRED

'Globalization starts from our ancestors in Africa who walk out from the said continent in the late Ice Age.

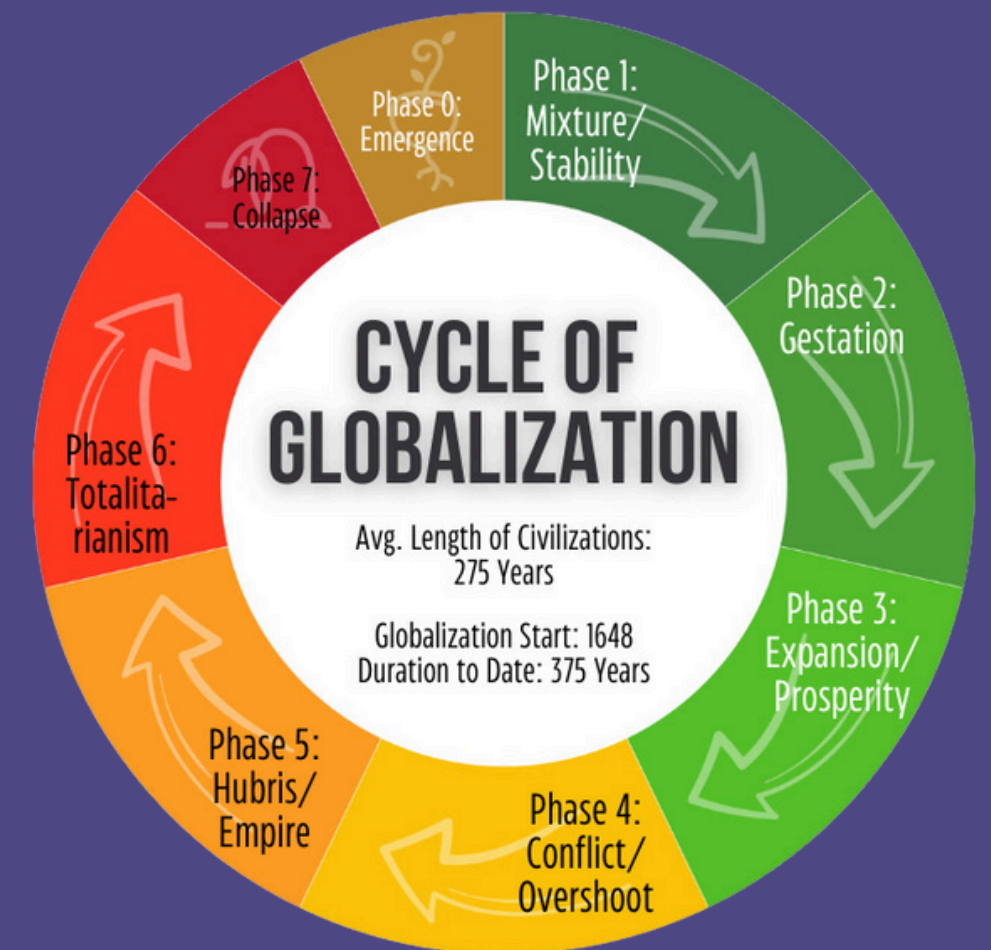

Commerce, religion, politics, and warfare are the 'urges' of people toward a better life and these are connected to four aspects of globalization the trade, missionary work, adventures and conquest'

-NAYAN CHANDA

Globalization is a long-term cyclical process and thus, finding its origin will be a daunting task. Globalization can soon disappear and reappear.

CYCLES

EPOCH(NOTABLE EVENTS)

EUROPEAN COLONIAL CONQUESTS
